

Special Issue on Infectious Diseases and Public Health

Call for Papers

Infectious Diseases and Public Health concerns the study of infectious diseases, their transmission, control, and prevention. This field encompasses the epidemiology of infectious diseases, immunology, pathogenesis, virology, bacteriology, and parasitology. It also involves the social and behavioral aspects of infectious disease transmission and control, public health policy and management, and international health. Researchers in this field work to develop effective prevention strategies, vaccines, treatments, and public health policies to control the spread of infectious diseases and improve population health.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Infectious Diseases and Public Health. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Epidemiology of infectious diseases
- Disease surveillance and outbreak investigation
- Modeling and forecasting
- Transmission models
- Diagnostics and laboratory methods
- Biomedical and clinical research
- Prevention and control
- Public health policies and interventions
- Antimicrobial resistance
- Public health microbiology
- Health disparities and infectious diseases
- Immunization and vaccine development
- COVID-19 and public health

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Infectious Diseases and Public Health” should be chosen during your submission.
