

Special Issue on Comparative & World Literature

Call for Papers

Comparative and World Literature is an interdisciplinary field of study that encompasses literary works from numerous cultures and languages, and analyzes their relationships and differences. It examines literature from a global perspective, comparing works from different countries and regions to reveal common themes, cultural similarities and differences, and literary influences and exchanges. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of Comparative & World Literature.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Comparative & World Literature. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Literary theory and criticism
- Translation studies
- Cosmopolitanism and cross-cultural exchange
- Postcolonial and decolonial studies
- Global and planetary humanities
- World poetry and poetics
- Comparative drama and theatre
- Transnational modernisms
- Diaspora and migration studies
- Ecocriticism and environmental humanities
- Travel writing and transnational studies
- World novel and human rights studies
