

Special Issue on Education and Skills Development

Call for Papers

"Education and Skills Development" refers to the process and methodologies involved in enhancing an individual's knowledge base, cognitive abilities, and practical skills through formal schooling, training, and hands-on learning experiences. This multidisciplinary field encompasses a range of topics, including instructional design, curriculum planning, pedagogy, assessment methods, and technology integration. Its goal is to equip individuals with the necessary competencies and expertise for personal development, employability, and active citizenship. Emphasis is placed on creating inclusive, accessible learning environments that cater to diverse learning needs and foster lifelong learning.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Education and Skills Development. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Learning skills and styles
- Curriculum and instruction
- Educational assessment and evaluation
- Education policy and reform
- Cognitive and creative skill development
- Problem solving
- Social and emotional learning
- Social interpersonal skills
- Psychological skills in education
- Intercultural skills
- Language skills
- Collaboration, innovation and leadership
- Academic skill and achievement
