Special Issue on Information Systems and Computer Science

Call for Papers

Information Systems and Computer Science is an interdisciplinary field that merges technology, business, and science to study the design, implementation, and management of information systems. It encompasses areas such as software development, database management, systems analysis, and network architecture, alongside the theoretical foundations of computation and algorithmic processes. This field aims to develop and apply technologies to solve complex problems and optimize organizational operations, enhancing data processing, information management, and digital communication within the framework of modern computing environments.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Information Systems and Computer Science. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Artificial intelligence
- Human-computer interaction
- Software engineering
- Database systems
- Computer networks
- Information security
- Data science
- Cloud computing and distributed systems
- Information retrieval
- Computer graphics and visualization
- Information systems and decision sciences
- Management information system

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Information Systems and Computer Science” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:
