

Special Issue on Labor Economics

Call for Papers

Labor economics focuses on the study of the labor force as an element in the process of production, in which labor is a measure of the work done by human beings. Labor related issues have been studied in the economics profession from many different angles. The goal of this special issue is to cover a wide range of topics in labor economics from various perspectives.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Labor Economics. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Job security
- Human capital
- Labor market flows
- Labor demand
- Labor supply
- Unemployment
- Self-employment
- Worker well-being

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Labor Economics” should be selected during your submission.

Special Issue Timetable:

Submission Deadline	September 20th, 2017
Publication Date	October 2017

Guest Editor:

For further questions or inquiries, please contact Editorial Assistant at me@scirp.org.