

Special Issue on Language Translation and Interpretation

Call for Papers

Language translation and interpretation is the communication of the meaning of a source-language by means of an equivalent target-language. It is the process of converting one language into another language in a way that is culturally and linguistically appropriate so it can be understood by its intended audience. Language translating mainly refer to the written word, while interpreting focuses on the spoken word. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of Language Translation and Interpretation.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Language Translation and Interpretation. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Metaphrase
- Paraphrase
- Etymology
- Bible translations
- Bilingual dictionary
- English translation
- Literal translation
- Machine translation
- Medical translation
- Consecutive interpreting
- Simultaneous interpreting
- Source language cultures
- Interpretation services
- Translation services
- Language interpretation
- Language translation

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - *Language Translation and Interpretation” should be selected during your submission.

Special Issue Timetable:

Submission Deadline	March 30th, 2022
Publication Date	May 2022

Guest Editor:

For further questions or inquiries, please contact Editorial Assistant at ojml@scirp.org.